Architecture for Dogs

For those of you with a little extra time on your hands... I thought these were hilarious!

(Wallpaper*) -- It may be tough to teach old dogs new tricks, but perhaps they can learn to live in new houses. Japanese graphic designer and curator Kenya Hara has made it his mission to find out.

Debuting at Design Miami in early December, in collaboration with a star-studded cast of designers and architects from America, Europe and Japan, this online venture supplies free blueprints for 13 different DIY doghouses, each one earmarked for a particular breed.

Hara hopes that pet enthusiasts everywhere will build them and that their photos will go viral and kickstart an online architectural discourse about the designs when the website launches this month.

Hara has been mulling over the idea of designer doghouses for around 15 years, and the project finally caught the attention of American investors at Imprint Venture Lab. Hara knew the pet-related theme would be popular, he said, 'I have the impression that the whole world is interested in babies and dogs.'

Building on the "man's best friend" bond, he started by matching designers to dogs, choosing only small breeds that like to live inside. Some are random pairings, such as the Dachshund with architects Atelier Bow-Wow and the Toy Poodle with product designer Konstantin Grcic, but others are special requests, like architect

Toyo Ito who wanted to build for his own Shiba, and Kengo Kuma who was keen to make a new home for a client's Pug.

Because conversation with their canine clients could be a bit one-sided, Hara provided each designer with a dossier of information covering the physical characteristics, temperament and health concerns of their breed. Human needs were considered in the brief, too, which stipulated that the doghouses should be easy for anyone to assemble with ordinary household tools and materials.

Leading the pack, Hara launched the project by designing two doghouses of his own: a hard, paper cone suspended from

Upcoming Meeting

The next meeting of the DKC membership will take place on Monday, January 21, 2013. Do plan to attend and bring a dish for our potluck dinner.

Dinner will be served at 7:00 pm. Bring a friend at 7:00 and furry friends are welcome at 7:30 pm.

Program: Member discussion of plans for the agility program: land improvement, planning for shows, etc.

the ceiling for a Japanese Terrier and a plywood contraption for a Teacup Poodle. Intended to improve contact between pooch and person, the poodle's structure consists of a 70cm-high, wedge-shaped wooden tunnel enclosing a puppy-sized run of stairs. They lead up to a platform at chair height where the dog can recline while gazing adoringly at his owner.

"Putting a dog on the table is not so good," says Hara. "Yet the floor is a little too far away." Located between these two extremes, Hara's proposal may have conceptual merit. But it took lots of Liver Snaps to coax a live Poodle up the stairs.

This reaction is not much of a surprise since the actual dogs did not participate much during the design phase. And when they did, many were more challenging than human clients. Architect Sou Fujimoto's subject, a Boston Terrier rented at a Tokyo dog park, refused to even go inside the prototype. Scrapping that sphere-shaped model, Fujimoto devised an open-frame structure instead, reminiscent of his House NA.

Most designers started by presenting a conceptual sketch to Hara and his staff who then investigated ways to realize the projects. "Architects are very busy so we tried to provide ideas for materials and construction methods," explains Hara.

Like a fast-paced game of fetch, ideas moved back and forth between the designers and team Hara. Sometimes it took four or five months to develop a realistic solution -- more time than required for many full-fledged buildings. And even then certain proposals, such as Toyo Ito's inflatable, vinyl roof worn on the dog's back, still proved unbuildable.

Others, however, like architect Kazuyo Sejima's home for a Bichon Frise, met with more success. The Pritzker-prize winner had little time to spare, but knew that she wanted to create something fluffy for her assistant's fuzzy white pup. Running with her idea, Hara's group began exploring soft materials and ways to support them.

In due course, all agreed on a curved wooden frame enrobed by a hand-knitted cover. Though it bears little resemblance to the minimalist, glass buildings that have made Sejima famous, her doghouse got a warm reception from its canine resident who crawled inside and took an immediate liking to the soft, protective shell.

The Tokyo architecture firm Torafu also sincerely considered the needs of its Jack Russell Terrier, creating an easy-to-build, simple structure that recycles old clothes. Resembling a hammock, it consists of a wooden frame that supports an old T-shirt, preferably one well worn by the dog's owner. "The smell of the owner is very, very important for a dog," says Hara.

But a pooch's response is only one measure of success. "Architecture for Dogs is not a pet's project," explains Hara. "It is a project for architects." For that reason, he engaged Yugo Nakamura, one of Japan's leading web designers, to create the interactive, trilingual website where participants can download drawings and view instructional videos, as well as upload photos of their newly built pet palaces, showcasing customizations and material substitutions.

"One idea can create lots of architecture around the world," says Hara. And potentially turn Architecture for Dogs into a catalyst for architectural invention.

Hello all--

So, another trial is done. I certainly had a great time and hope that was shared by our club members. It is so wonderful to see our members and their dogs working at our home! It is also great to see our guests share our facility. The weekend has such a homey feel. Our members work so hard to make this a great weekend!

As always our trial committee, Tracy Fletcher (trial secretary), Lorrie Givens (trophy chair for Rally), Lisa Roberts (trophy chair for obedience), Sally Ridge (chief ring steward), Cathy Wells (concession chair), and Roger Akers (grounds) was fabulous and did all the tough work. They are "The Dream Team" for obedience trials.

Then of course there are all the hard working stewards, kitchen help, food bringers, set uppers, and break downers. There are just too many to name. Some of our members worked all 3 days. All went out of their way to be helpful and gracious! There cannot be a more fabulous dog family anywhere!

Many thanks to you all,

-- Nancy Akers, Trial Chair

On behalf of the exhibitors, spectators, workers, and judges at this weekend's Rally & Obedience Trials, I want to give a special thank you to those who contributed food and manned the kitchen on Friday night and for breakfast and lunch on Saturday and Sunday: Ellen Beasley, Nicki Camerra, Susan Cicone, Cathie Fogel, Sharon Pitz, Liz Rende, Lisa Roberts, Peggy Schmidt, Patty Van Sicklen, Phyllis Wood (and her daughter and granddaughter), and Dale Wisniewski. It was all delicious! We got rave reviews from many very appreciative people, and there was not much left over! We had such a great variety of soups and stews, and the bonus chicken salad and BBQ for sandwiches was awesome. And desserts! Wow, what a spread; everyone's sweet tooth was well-satisfied. It's not always easy to fit "cooking for a crowd" into your schedule, and you guys really stepped up to the plate. so to speak...:-))

Another big thanks to those who helped us clean up--Lisa, Roger, Nancy, Lorri, Sharon, Sally--and especially to Scott, whose help and skill in the kitchen is priceless.

(PS: Susan, the judges were happy to have onions!!)

-- Cathy Wells

DKC just finished up another successful obedience trial.

Thanks to the generosity of many of our members every class was sponsored each day of our rally and obedience trials. As trophy chair I cannot thank our sponsors enough for their part in making the December trials a success!

I had many compliments on the trials (and the prizes) throughout the weekend from exhibitors who have been attending for years to first time Novice A exhibitors.

Although I don't think I could name everyone who helped in some way I would like to thank Nancy Akers, the trial chair, and Roger Akers for all of their before during and after work! All the hours they put in seemed to make the trial run very smoothly.

Thanks to Tracy Fletcher for his role as trial secretary. He does a wonderful, efficient job before and during the trials (even with me bothering him and asking questions all day!).

Thanks to Cathy and Scott Wells for their organization of the food and working the kitchen for all 3 trials. To all the members who donated their wonderful food, I have to say we must have the best trial food anywhere! Even if you don't trial it is worth coming just to eat! Thank you.

Thanks to Sally Ridge for her role of chief ring steward. She recruits and organizes all of stewards for obedience and makes all the ring check-in boards. We had some great stewards!

Thanks to Lorri Givens for being Rally trophy chair. She was a great help in putting together all the Rally and Obedience trials prizes!

I know there are many, many others who helped with the trials and I would like to thank all of you. It makes me proud to be a DKC member and have so many members come together to put on successful trials!

On page 3 is a list of all of our class sponsors and special prize donations. We had many compliments on the prizes. If you were an exhibitor please be sure to thank your class sponsor!

Thanks again,

-- Lisa Roberts

The December newsletter wasn't published because of "technical difficulties," so these thank yous are long overdue. Even though you have seen them in email, they are still valid!

Cell Tower

The Club has been approached by American Tower, Inc, about placing a cell tower on our property. This company installs and maintains cell towers for AT&T Wireless Communications. The company would like to negotiate a long-term lease with DKC. The term of the lease would consist of an initial 5-year lease with four 5-year renewal leases (25 years). This cell tower lease could generate significant revenue for DKC over the 25-year period.

I have met with their representative to discuss the details of the lease and where the cell tower would be located on the property. The cell tower would require a footprint of 100 ft. by 100 ft. with a gravel access road. Contained within the footprint would be the cell tower, backup diesel generator and a hut containing wireless equipment. This area would be enclosed in a fence (slatted chain link or wooden - our choice).

The board has approved the initial contact and to proceed with the process. Further discussion will be held at our next member meeting on November 19, 2012.

Impervious Surface

There has been much discussion and concern of how much land we have for future development or expansion of our present building. I have some good news. After reviewing the Durham County Unified Development Ordinance, I found a section which describes Exceptions (section 8.7.3) to the new ordinance and I quote:

8.7.3. Exceptions

All development within Watershed Protection Overlays shall be subject to the restrictions in this section, with the following exceptions:

A. Existing Development

For the purposes of this section, existing development shall be considered to include any impervious surfaces constructed before January 1, 1994. All new uses and activities and all expansions of previously-existing uses and activities shall conform to Sec. 4.11.4, Nonresidential Land Use Restrictions and Sec. 8.7.2, General Requirements.

This means that our building, parking area, and road are exempt from the new ordinance. This means that we have over 63,000 sq ft that we can develop. This much square footage should meet all our present and future needs.

Agility Field Development Update

First, I would like to inform the membership that we have entered into discussion to hold a four-day fall 2013 agility trial with the Danville Kennel Club at the Old Dominion Agricultural Complex in Chatham VA. (<http://www.theodac.com>). This site is an indoor facility and could be a lucrative endeavor for our club.

In light of this new development and concerns about holding outdoor agility classes, the Board agreed to limit the development of the field behind the building. We would proceed with fencing an area of 120' x 120' for use by our club members, but hold off future development of the fields and review our options after the fall 2013 trial with the Danville Kennel Club.

Program: Dr Matthew Breen, a member of the NCSU Center for Comparative Medicine and Translational Research and the Cancer Genetics Program at the University of North Carolina's Lineberger Comprehensive Cancer Center, presented a program about his research.

The Meeting was called to order at 8:50 pm.

The Minutes from the October Meeting were approved as published in the newsletter.

Several guests were introduced.

President's report: Information had been sent to the membership regarding a proposal to erect a cell tower on Durham Kennel Club's land. We are waiting to hear whether site is suitable before we can progress.

Since it is undecided where our future agility trials will be held (until after the Fall 2013 trial in Chatham) the club will not go ahead with plans to develop the agility field at the back of the building. Instead, the field will be fenced and the club's agility equipment will be made available to members for training.

Recording and Corresponding secretaries' reports: none

Treasurer's report: The Treasurer reported the current account balances.

AKC delegate report: none

Membership: The names and bios of candidate membership applicants were read in: Dana and Michael Kelly, David Kresge, Rebecca (Becky) Moore, Gina and Bill Rankin and Susan C. Taylor.

Spring show: The judge has been approved. Many volunteers are needed. Maria Walker has volunteered to keep the grounds clean; she will need volunteers to help. Peggy Schmidt has a list of all trophies and would welcome donations. Peggy is also the rally chair and needs volunteer stewards.

Agility trial (Fall 2013): Danville Kennel Club has confirmed that they will share a 4-day trial with Durham Kennel Club at the trial site in Chatham.

Winter obedience trial: The trial has not filled but we have more entries than last year. More volunteers are needed.

Tracking: There were no passes at the October tracking test. There will be a TDX trial on February 10, 2013, and a TD trial on March 17. Liz Rende asked if people who are interested in setting up a tracking group would contact her.

Obedience classes: The obedience committee has several new classes on their schedule, some of which are online now. They hope to offer more daytime classes in the future.

Conformation classes: There is one more class in November and then there will be a break until January.

Freestyle class: There will be freestyle classes on Saturday, December 15. Beginner level will be 11:00 – 1:00 pm and a higher level for those with some experience at 1:00 – 3:00 pm.

Building Committee: A new committee has been set up to explore the possibility of expanding the building.

There were several brags.

The meeting was adjourned at 9:25 pm.

2013 Obedience and Rally Trials at NetSports

The Obedience and Rally trials at NetSports will be held July 13-14, 2013, pending AKC approval. Judges are Karen Anderson, Chris Cornell, and Linda Scanlon. All regular, optional, and non-titling classes will be offered. This allows you to enter more than 1 class! Get a Team together, enter 2 of your dogs in Brace, or enter the Wildcard classes! Start practicing for Advanced Teamwork! There are lots of great options with these classes. Come join us and have fun. Exhibitors at the trial in 2012 loved the site. There is plenty of room for crating with no crowding.

There will probably be a match July 12.

Changes in AKC Agility Rules

Here is some information regarding new AKC rule changes in agility effective January 1, 2013.

1. As of January 2013, the Excellent B classes will be referred to as Master classes and the Excellent A classes will be called Excellent classes. If your dog is trying to earn an AX, AXJ, or the preferred equivalents, he or she must be in the "Excellent" class. Once he or she has earned these titles, she will move into the Master class. Expect to see these class changes on the 2013 entry forms.
2. Clubs will be permitted to host up to 12 agility trials a year instead of 8.
3. The ability to move laterally from Regular to Preferred classes has now been finalized. Here are the basics, from Steve Herwig (AKC rep):
 - Effective January 1, 2013, an exhibitor may show their dog in a Preferred class that is equal to or less than where their dog is currently showing in the equivalent Regular classes. As such, a MACH dog may initially enter Master Preferred level STD/JWW classes, skipping the lower Excellent, Open, and Novice Preferred levels.
 - Once we see a dog qualify in Preferred on/after January 1, that will become the dog's "starting point" for Preferred. As such, if a MACH dog qualifies in Novice Preferred on/after January 1, 2013, then the dog must complete the Novice, Open, and Excellent level classes before being eligible to enter Master Preferred.

- This is a ONE-TIME crossover allowance – based on the first qualifying Preferred class entry AKC processes on/after January 1, 2013.
- No legs/Qs or points cross over from Regular to Preferred.
- Each class (ie, Standard, JWW, FAST, T2B) has its own, separate one-time crossover allowance.
- The crossover does not work "backwards" from Preferred to Regular.

So if a dog is currently in Excellent A Standard and Open JWW, the dog can be moved to Excellent Preferred and Open Preferred after January 1. If the dog gets entered in those levels and does not qualify, it can be moved down (to Open Std or Novice JWW) in the Preferred class. BUT if a dog who has an AX is entered and Qs in Novice Preferred after January 1, it MUST finish the Novice and Open levels before getting back up to Excellent.

If a dog who has the MX and MXJ titles has already been moved down to Preferred and is in one of the lower level classes now, the dog can be entered in Master Preferred classes after January 1, without completing all of the lower level Preferred titles. It's all about what Regular titles the dog has as of January 1 - that determines what level it can be entered in Preferred.

DIY: Felted Dog Ball

Positively fun, absolutely useful DIY. There's something for every skill level, from super-easy felted wool balls and a bag-holder that attaches to a leash to a cozy crocheted bed and a folding feeding stand—little comforts that make life more pleasant for both you and your dog. (We'll let you in on a secret: You can also purchase the ball kit, leash bag and bed from the craftswomen who provided the instructions; see the contact information.)

Materials

- Uncarded wool (Merino is the easiest to felt)
- Long piece of roving (washed and carded wool)
- Tights/pantyhose
- Bowl of hot soapy water

Finished size: Comparable to a tennis ball

Note: For safety, balls intended for use by small children or dogs should be at least the size of a tennis ball and used under supervision.

Beginning

Press the uncarded wool together, shaping it into a ball, and wrap the roving tightly around it. Holding the ball, slip your hand into the tights down to the toe. As you hold the ball inside the tights, use your other hand to pull the tights over your hand, leaving the ball of wool inside.

Middle

Gently soak the ball in the hot soapy water. Leaving the ball inside the tights, toss it from hand to hand; you may also roll it between your hands and squeeze it softly. Do this very gently for about 20 minutes. Next, take the ball out of the tights. Now you can squeeze it much harder; do this for about 10 more minutes. As you work, the ball should get smaller and harder.

End

Rinse the ball in cold water, squeeze out the excess water and let air dry. Read more at <http://thebark.com/content/felted-dog-ball#xLZyWgm8KvSqt0x0.99>
